Infrastructure Overview

To 'Make in India', you have to first 'Make India'!

Infrastructure development has been the main pillar of global socio-economic development over last several decades. In advanced countries, the focus has been on upgradation of infrastructure; while in the developing countries, the thrust has been on creation of basic infrastructure.

Infrastructure sector includes various verticals such as, but not limited to, roads & bridges, ports, urban infrastructure, realty, railways, airports, power, mining, oil & gas, renewable energy, social infrastructure, etc.

To grow and sustain the momentum of Indian economy over a longer period in future, the infrastructure sector needs to accelerate its long term growth rate. For this purpose, this sector will require not only huge amount of investments but also a large number of highly skilled managers for efficient implementation and operation of huge infrastructure projects. Currently, there is a large gap between the demand and the availability of trained managerial resources with adequate knowledge and specialization in the infrastructure management. With sustained high growth of Indian economy, this gap is going to widen in the future.
